1. Discussion: The Book

The book continues pretty much as it was last May but I have been working away on a project that will be of assistance to me as I go back into the census. I must work my way forwards as well as backwards preparing the genealogical charts for the Pencombe family of North Molton commonly surnamed as Pincombe although some members of the family did choose to use Pinkham hence this study as long as I have managed it at the Guild of one-name Studies has been using both Pincombe and Pinkham as the study names which was the way that the original researchers set it up (namely Galen Pinkham and Dr Richard Pinkham).

I have been collecting and entering into my matches database the matches of five siblings (including myself) found on Living DNA. There are quite a few Pincombe out of the 419 matches that I have collected. This includes 79 matches that I have placed in the Pincombe grouping which includes a group for each of my four grandparents. This will include individuals that have various other surnames including Rew, Siderfin, Rowcliffe, Pearce, Charly/Charley/Charlie, Manning but not limited to which takes me back into the mid 1600s and these surnames intermarried into my lines only as late as the early 1830s. Since I live in Canada and this database is heavily United Kingdom it has been most interesting to discover how often in my lines that the match I have is with individuals who have married into other lines from which I descend since I am 100% British Isles back hundreds of years with the only known non British Isles being my Huguenot ancestors who came to Dunster, Somerset in the late 1400s from France.

That has kept me very busy these past few months as I was re-phasing my grandparents DNA and beginning work on phasing my great-grandparents DNA and in the case of Pincombe this includes Rew (John Pincombe married Elizabeth Rew 9 Jan 1834 at Bishops Nympton and they were my emigrant ancestors to Canada in the spring of 1851). Their son William Robert Pincombe was my great grandfather.

2. DNA and its value in the study

I continue deferring any discussion on YDNA within the study but I may have some interesting autosomal DNA results that could be interesting at some point in this next year or so. I have a lot of known Pincombe results from my autosomal DNA studies but this is pretty much restricted to 5th cousins although surprisingly DNA has managed to take me a tiny way back from that on occasion.
