- 1. Discussion: A book to be written on the Pencombe/Pincombe/Pyncombe/Pinkham family

Although I have alluded to the idea on the blog a number of time, I am now committing myself to writing a book on the Pencombe/Pincombe/Pyncombe/Pinkham families of North Devon. I am in the process of editing/revising another book on a family line that is part of the story although not directly affecting this new book idea. The Siderfin family married into the Pincombe family when Elizabeth Rew (whose mother was Elizabeth (Betty) Siderfin) married John Pincombe at Bishops Nympton 9 Jan 1834. Hence this newsletter will start to contain some of my thoughts as I go forward with this book. The next issue, 1st December 2023 will hopefully coincide with the completion of the Siderfin book and my cataract surgery at some point in that time frame. I have been busy collecting information the past nearly 20 years now on the Pincombe family from which I descend through my mother Helen (Pincombe) Blake. I have a lot of family lore, some documents and a lot of autosomal DNA on this line. I also have the yDNA on this line taking it back to John Pincombe married to Mary Charly 8 Nov 1767 at Bishops Nympton and my 4x great grandparents. The matches in both types of DNA are both interesting and perhaps confusing. I inherited the research of Dr Richard Pinkham and Galen Pinkham in 2010 on one of our trips to the British Isles which included a period of time researching at Kew and at the Society of Genealogists. The researchers had kindly deposited material at the Society. With this material, I was then able to look at all of the families for which they had gathered material both by word of mouth from descendants (Dr Richard Pinkham was in the Gloucestershire area) and from the records. I learned a lot from all of this information and continue to learn. There are over 50,000 hits on Find My Past for this family and I will have to decide whether to actually set myself down and go through all of this material. When I think about it logically I can not see how I would write a book without doing so to be honest. I did that very thing with the Siderfin family but the hits were 10% of the hits for Pincombe so was somewhat less disconcerting. But I suspect, in the desire to be as accurate and complete as possible I will go through all of this material.

The Pencombe etc. family in these first three generations was located in the North/South Molton area as mentioned in the last issue and the movement out of the direct North Molton/South Molton area had, for the most part not yet occurred.

Surname	Forename (descent)	Parish	Year	Property
Pyncombe	Christopher (Christopher3,John2,John1)	South Molton	1544	10
Pyncome	John (John2,John1)	South Molton	1544	13
Pynkeham	Philip (possibly Philip2,John1)	Tawstocke	1544	8
Pencombe	Richard (Richard3, Thomas2, John1)	Bideford	1544	9
Pencombe	Thomas (Thomas2, John1)	East Buckland	1544	9
Pencombe	Alice (wid)	North Molton	1545	5
Pencombe	John (John3, John2, John1)	North Molton	1545	4
Pencombe	Richard (Richard3, Thomas2, John1)	Kings Nympton	1545	1
Pencombe	William (William2, John1)	North Molton	1545	6

This table rather neatly displays all of the information gleaned thus far from the various records but does not include my actually going through the parish registers in the areas around North Molton/South Molton nor does it include areas when the family name(s) appeared by 1600 as the sons of the family moved away from North Molton in order to determine whether or not there were outliers with the sought surname. Going through all the hits in Find My Past would do that.

2. Autosomal DNA and its value

Initially yDNA and mtDNA occupied the companies first offering these tests to interested individuals. But gradually perhaps as early as 2008 autosomal started to look interesting and by 2012 was very interesting and this is partly due to the impact that Ancestry.com (ca, etc) had in the world of DNA. Although they do not have a chromosome browser; indeed they offer no details on the chromosomes other than the number of segments shared the size in centimorgans and this number is limited by the use of an algorithm TIMBER which strips DNA in common (because of ethnicity mostly) from the overall total amount. But none the less the shared matches and common ancestry give you an exciting picture which can be significant even back to a 5th cousin and interesting beyond that but perhaps one shouldn't base a line on it! Although I do have all types of DNA included in the Pincombe DNA study at FT DNA I do note the limits of that study. I would need a yDNA descendant of John Pincombe and Grace Manning married 20 Mar 1725 to prove the yDNA line back to this likely couple (mostly because their names appeared in a Bible in my mother's memory) or William Pincombe and Mary Vicary married 17 Jun 1685 at Bishops Nympton or John Pincombe and Johane Blackmoore married 25 Sep 1658 at Bishops Nympton (my likely 7x great grandparents) and the line continues back into time. It may happen one day but at the moment I do not have such descendancy so do not make a 100% claim to the idea that the Pencombe yDNA is a particular line. Time will probably provide the answer and like the Siderfin book I will publish this book under Creative Commons License in order that updates/revisions can be made to my original test and in my lifetime if that occurs. There are many documents for me to transcribe on the early lines of the Pincombe family of North Devon and some for the Pencombe family of Herefordshire.

Finding that link would be amazing and take this family back to the late 1200s or early 1300s always an amazing feat given the sparsity of records in this time frame. The autosomal matches are questionable unless the line being compared is clearly known so that one is sharing only that line and not actually matching on another line. But it is interesting when you get three or four or even more as my Pincombe family has tested heavily these days allowing one to see these matches and common areas of autosomal DNA that have been passed down through time. So on to the book hopefully beginning sometime in January following my recovery from cataract surgery or before whilst I await the surgery.

3. Landkey Parish Records

These marriage records are transcribed from the fiche of the original Parish Records for Landkey, Devon. I have changed the orientation of the newsletter to make it easier to publish the transcriptions for Landkey directly from my Excel file. This completes the marriages and the next issue will have the burials. I only purchased the Parish Records into the early to mid 1700s so these records do not extend past that date.
